THE Governor's doubts as to the success likely to attend any new legislation for the suppression of gambling will, we think, be shared by all who have given any attention sold to day by auction for 58 guilders." this difficult subject. Something might perhaps be done to control the evil, but its suppression is quite impossible. Sir Richard MADDONNELL's schome was the most promising of all the attempts which have been made to deal with the subject, but it is hopeless to expect the home Government to assent to its revival. After all the efforts of the last twenty-five years we doubt whether the evil of gambling is one whit less rampant in the Colony than it would have been had no law on the subject ever been passed. Large numbers of people have been sent into gaol for the offence and there have been a good many fatalities in connection with the taids made by the police on the gambling. louses, but whether any real good has been done is exceedingly problematical. We know at all events that gambling is as rife now as ever it was. Indeed, the gambling laws of Hongkong, form a striking example,

It is pretty certain that His Majesty the Emperor has suffered from a very severe attack of influenza. A rumour to that effect found its way abroad at the time when nearly all the Court ladies were attacked by the epidemic, but the Imperial ailments are kept wonderfully quiet in this country, and people soon became persuaded that the Sovereign's condition had been falsely represented. Now, however, the vernacular press states very confidently that this Majesty's illness lasted forty days, and that a high degree of fever was registered at one time. Happily

His Majesty is now convalescent. On Monday night, the 9th February, the Imperial Hotel, Tokyo, was for a time in considerable danger. Owing to the exceeding cold of the night, large fires had been lit in the bedrooms, and at some time after twelve o'clock a grantity of live coals seems to have fallon from the grate in the chamber occupied by Mr. Mandi. Tumbling outside the fend r, they burned their way through the floor, and had set fire to the Mandi awoke and gave the alarm. A little longer delay would probably have enabled the conflagration to gain a strong head Whother. in that case, the Hotel would have been destroyed, it is difficult to say, for provision against fire has been made by placing an immense tank in the third storey. But what is certain that had the building been burned, nothing could have persuaded the public that political incendiaries were not responsible for the destruction of both the Diet and the Hotel, since the latter is now used by the House of Peers. The disastrous fire at Igura in Tokyo, on the 9th February, reduced 163 dwelling houses and 6 -redowns to ashes, and partially destroyed 11 dwellings and I godown.
